

Bell Real talk

Together, telecom workers are standing up against a corporate giant. As union members, this is our specialty.

We have strength in numbers.

Bell Real talk

Together, telecom workers are standing up against a corporate giant. As union members, this is our specialty.

We have strength in numbers.

What we're fighting for:

Jobs in the telco sector should be reliable, fulfilling careers. It's not too much to ask. We work in an innovative and challenging industry, and as workers, we deserve to be excited about new technology, not punished as a result of it. Jobs in this sector should be good jobs, where good mental health is supported, without penalties for belonging to a union or other attempts to erode the quality and quantity of full time jobs at Bell and Bell subsidiaries.

How we'll get it done:

Growing good jobs means drawing a line in the sand with Bell, demanding better workplaces and fighting back on every front. We're building activism through bargaining, local campaigns, and national efforts like Unifor's fightback against the outsourcing of Wireless to the Home.

We took a huge step forward by filing a common employer application with the Canadian Industrial Relations Board (CIRB) making the case that Expertech is wholly owned and controlled by Bell Canada.

As this application moves through the CIRB, we must continue to pressure Bell every step of the way to make the right decisions.

That starts by signing up.
Then you'll get to show up at actions across the country.

Register at www.bellrealtalk.ca to volunteer for future events or share your story.

 UniforCanada
 @UnifortheUnion

Designed By JK-CFU

What we're fighting for:

Jobs in the telco sector should be reliable, fulfilling careers. It's not too much to ask. We work in an innovative and challenging industry, and as workers, we deserve to be excited about new technology, not punished as a result of it. Jobs in this sector should be good jobs, where good mental health is supported, without penalties for belonging to a union or other attempts to erode the quality and quantity of full time jobs at Bell and Bell subsidiaries.

How we'll get it done:

Growing good jobs means drawing a line in the sand with Bell, demanding better workplaces and fighting back on every front. We're building activism through bargaining, local campaigns, and national efforts like Unifor's fightback against the outsourcing of Wireless to the Home.

We took a huge step forward by filing a common employer application with the Canadian Industrial Relations Board (CIRB) making the case that Expertech is wholly owned and controlled by Bell Canada.

As this application moves through the CIRB, we must continue to pressure Bell every step of the way to make the right decisions.

That starts by signing up.
Then you'll get to show up at actions across the country.

Register at www.bellrealtalk.ca to volunteer for future events or share your story.

 UniforCanada
 @UnifortheUnion

Designed By JK-CFU